Words and music by Caroline Cobb / CCLI song # 7159406
Genesis 3, Isaiah 6:11-13, 11:1-5, 9:1-7, Malachi 4:2

$\text{♩} = 57$ , key of D

$\frac{3}{4}$  | D  $\frac{4}{4}$  | B<sup>m</sup>  $\frac{3}{4}$  | G  $\frac{4}{4}$  | D

VERSE 1      D                      B<sup>m</sup>                      G                      D
A broken mirror, painted black / There is no light reflected back
D                                      B<sup>m</sup>                      G                                      D
Thorns grow up where there was green / All sorrow, shame, and broken things
Paradise has barred its doors / It's guarded by the flaming sword
G                                      A                      B<sup>m</sup>
We can't go back, we can't go back

CHORUS 1      G              A              B<sup>m</sup>                                      G               $\frac{4}{4}$  | A
We wait, we wait for You / Come with Your light / We wait, we wait

VERSE 2      D                                      B<sup>m</sup>                                      G                                      D
A forest cut down by the axe / Like the end of the story, when it's all turned to ash
D    B<sup>m</sup>                                      G                                      A                      B<sup>m</sup>
But up from the stump, the bud of a flower / A seed of hope in the eleventh hour
And from the shadow the sun will rise / The people in darkness will see a great light
G                                      A                      B<sup>m</sup>
We're longing, praying for the dawn

CHORUS 2      G              A              B<sup>m</sup>                                      G               $\frac{4}{4}$  | A
We wait, we wait for You / Come with Your light
G                      A                      B<sup>m</sup>                                      G                       $\frac{4}{4}$  | A
We wait, we wait for You / Come with Your light / We wait, we wait

VERSE 3      D                                      B<sup>m</sup>                                      G                                      D
He takes the thorns upon His head / His body pierced, His arms outstretched
D    B<sup>m</sup>                                      G                                      B<sup>m</sup>
Says "It is finished," and the sun went down / We laid His body in the ground
But life, oh, life comes bursting forth / And paradise swings wide its doors
Our King will rise to take His throne / And He will return to lead us home
To dry every tear and right every wrong / How long, oh Lord? How long? How long?

CHORUS 3      ||: G              A              B<sup>m</sup>                                      :||
We wait, we wait for You / Come with Your light (4x)

We wait, we wait / We wait, we wait / We wait, we wait for You
